Another Plane Is Downed

Mass Give-Up Of 63 Cong Guerrillas

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Another U.S. plane was shot down over North Viet Nam today, bringing the toll in the last 24 hours of the quickening air war to three American aircraft.

The U.S. Command announced that American jets tangled with Communist MIG intercepters Monday for the fourth straight day, but there was no word that any American or North Vietnamese planes were downed in the dogfights.

In South Viet Nam, Vietnamese military headquarters announced the mass surrender of 63 Viet Cong guerrillas in the enemy-infested Hon Chong -Twin Sisters — mountain area on the Gulf of Siam near the Cambodian border.

A spokesman said that 2,250 peasants in the area dominated by the Viet Cong also sought the refuge of government and U.S. officials. The U.S. Agency for Honor Medal International Development arranged to send them rice, cook-to oil blookets and other suping oil, blankets and other sup-

I had the problem many years ago, and this is how it was resoyved. I had seven children in 12 years. I did all my own house work, took a part time job, not by choice but because I had to help pay the bills. My husband found something wrong with every place he worked. Either the people were beneath him socially, or the work was too hard, or the hours were too long or the job was too far from the house.

He drifted from one thing to another and finally he went into "semi-retirement" at age 45. How do you like that for a healthy man with plenty of ability? Unfortunately, he had no interest in anything but sex.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) Jim Bede says he is going to fly solo around the world without landing or taking on fuel.

The 33-year-old aeronautical engineer from Cleveland, Ohio, outlined the plans for his flight at the annual Christmas dinner of the Kansas and Missouri chapters of the Experimental Aircraft Association during the weekend.

Bede is having a special plane built in Wichita, Kan., that looks like a glider. Its wingspan of 53 feet is more than twice the 27-foot length of the fuselage.

It weighs only 1,725 pounds but can carry twice that weight in fuel. There are few sailplanes with better gliding capacity, Bede said.

"There are two important features on the plane," Bede said. "One is the high lift to drag ratio. We achieve this by using a very long, narrow wing. The airplane has very little drag for its weight. And by keeping the weight down, I can carry more gas."

The craft has a six-cylinder, 210-horsepower engine.

Bede figures the flight will take 150 hours—about six days. To get ready for it, two weeks before takeoff he plans to start a short sleep cycle - sleeping

Police Need Not Plug Ears

Controversy, agitation and misconception are three words which describe the confusion in people's minds concerning the U.S. Supreme Court's decision relating to the exclusion of prayers in schools.

Something of the same reaction is prevalent following the high court's opinion on taking of criminal confessions by law enforcement officers. The opinion has become a subject for wise-cracking and some scornful comment, too.

Nevertheless, when the high court ruled that a suspect must be advised of his right to counsel and his right to remain silent, law enforcement officers have been bending over backward to conform even carrying printed copies to read to a suspect.

Like juveniles, whose names must not be made public, criminal suspects are catching on rapidly when arrested or defiantly demanding their constitutional rights. In a sense it would appear the police and not the lawbreakers are the ones who wear the hand-

Have the states misinterpreted the ruling and bent much too far, at least in instances where courts have thrown out voluntary confessions, because these were made before the police informed the confessor he didn't have

This question is raised following a decision by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania overruling a lower court's decision which had suppressed a woman's voluntary confession in the death of two boys.

Pennsylvania Justice Michael A. Musmanno wrote:

"There is nothing in the federal or Pennsylvania decisions which require police, upon hearing a volunteered statement by anyone, to order the volunteer to cease talking."

It would appear, says the Pennsylvania Justice, that many judges around the country have been enforcing "supposed rules" the U. S. Supreme Court never intended to lay

"Police are not compelled to plug their ears when conscience bursts into the doors and the conscience-bearer bares red hands of guilt."

To the laymen interested in seeing the Crime Alert program work effectively, and certainly the law enforcement officers, this begins to make

A Children's Church

In Dallas, Texas, there is a special place of worship for children seven to twelve years old. "The Little Church," as it is called, is off the main area of the Central Christian Church. The children handle most of their own services, but an adult gives a short sermon.

The idea was started by Frank Brimm, and his widow continues the work with the help of other church members They work to keep "The Little Church" spacious and quiet, a place that does not make the children feel cramped. Mrs. Brimm says the church training the children get is very

A separate church for children may take hold among other denominations. The trend in most churches, however, is to dismiss the children for Sunday School after the opening exercises, or to have those beyond nursery age sit in the pews with their parents during the church service following their regular Sunday School service. This practice may be a little hard on the youngsters who find the theologian's presentation above their little heads, but it too is part of their church training. What will happen to the slogan "The family that prays together, stays together," if the children are sent off to a "Little Church" of their own? The Dallas experiment merits watching, but most churches find it difficult to maintain one house of worship without expanding into buildings for separate age groups.

Education Costs Skyrocketing

Acceleration to Modernize Schools

By BRUCE BIOSSAT Washington Correspondent Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON - Put two or more governors in a room together and they will most likely talk about their biggest problemwhere to get the money to finance the constantly rising demands of education.

More than one-third of the average state budget goes for education, and the proportion seems to be rising in many places. Quite a few states allot up to 45 per cent of their revenues to this purpose.

New York and California alone spend around $3.5 billion annually on schoolsroughly half the federal budget in Franklin D. Roosevelt's biggest spending year before World War II.

Many state leaders say frankly that the "school lobby" - representing pressure for funds from teachers, administrators, etc.is today virtually the most powerful in their

During the recent campaign, in a quiet talk on a bus with this reporter, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller voiced his concern at the continuing upward trend in schooling costs, which he said had doubled at the state level within the span of his first two terms and threatened to double again by 1972. The governor suggested that, with state and other tax resources being tapped almost to the limit, the time may not be far off when school authorities will simply be told they will have to "make do" with whatever money is available. They cannot, he thinks, keep on asking for a higher ceiling on spending. Rockefeller said that educators therefore must soon start thinking far more seriously than they have about automating the school process - to save costs and offset a potential teacher shortage far worse than any ever talked of before

This kind of talk frightens some school people, who fear that automation means making teachers more or less obsolete. Yet the use of electronic and other teaching aids is becoming steadily more common.

Business and industry are getting into this field on a widening scale. Experimental programs in such things as computer-assisted arning are under way. At the m course, these are extremely costly. Actually, this is only part of the story. Etrong efforts are being made to modernize the entire schooling process at the human level. The specialists' judgment is that this process today is more than a century behind the times, that both teachers and administrators badly misuse their talent and

The National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards, an arm of the National Education Association, is currently sponsoring live case studies in more than 100 demonstration schools across the country. The aim: To display and to test what can be done to make fuller, more efficient use of the trained teacher's time.

Donald Davies of this commission says that for too long the schooling process has been thought of as "one teacher and a bunch of kids working together in a little box (the schoolroom)."

The assumption has been, at elementary levels, that a single teacher could teach everything. Moreover, studies have shown that half the teacher's time is consumed in routine chores incidental to teachingthe supervising of play, the making of displays for Easter and other celebrations,

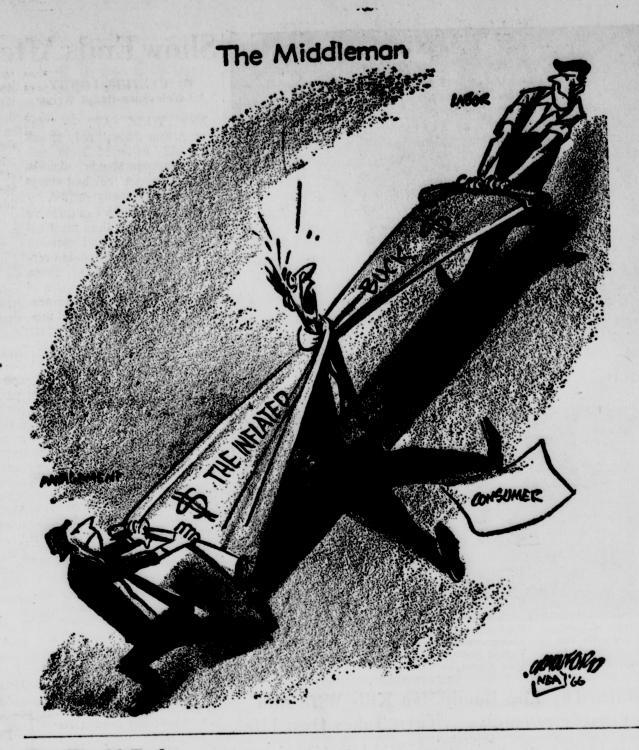

The new approach is to use the teacher as a specialist in particular learning fields, to put together teaching teams under imaginative leadership, to draw in either volunteer or part-paid outside help at various stages; for example, a housewife trained in chemistry may lend a hand in laboratory work at school.

More flexibility and freedom in the process for both teachers and students is the thread clearly visible in the 100 demonstration schools - soon to be joined by possibly

If their projects prove out, the business of educating America's young may, in Davies' view, become vastly more productive and manageable.

Teachers may enjoy more prestige and better pay - and thus be kept in the field. Right now the dropout rate is incredibly high. Of teachers newly hired in 1966, it is estimated fewer than half will still be teaching by 1969.

And, not the smallest prospect, an effective effort to modernize the schools ma take some of the heat off governors and others who are wondering where their next education dollar is coming from.

Recall Changing Point In Many Lives

By JAMES MARLOW Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) - Twenty-five years ago Wednesday was a gray day, cold, even in Louisiana. I was fishing in Salt Bayou, 30 miles from New Orleans, with a man who had taught English in some of the best schools in the East. He had an elegant touch, even toward fish. But we didn't catch any.

And when the sun began to dissolve behind the trees we went across the bayou, into the channel with the tall grass, keeping the outboard motor low. We pulled up at the wharf near Big Sam's boathouse. The little man who worked for him came skipping and hopping down to see us.

"This place is loaded with crappies," he said. "You ought to try them." We did. He kept telling us where they were: here, there, there. But we didn't get any. We were shaking in the cold. The sun was gone. We packed up and went up to the boathouse.

Big Sam was there, behind the counter where he sold soft drinks and sandwiches. But he hardly said hello to us. He was looking up at a radio on a shelf on the wall, and listening. There were two strangers there, too, looking up and listening.

And the voice on the radio was saying the Japanese had sunk the battleship Arizona. We thought we had come in late on a program. I asked Sam what the program was. He said there was no program. He said the Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor. I asked him if he was kidding. He said: "No. just listen." The voice was saying

I looked at the little man who had been jumping up and down about the crappies. I asked him: "Did you know about the Japanese when you came down to the dock?" He said: "Yes." I said: "Why didn't you tell us?" He said: "I never thought about

And, while the little man who liked crappies forgot about Pearl Harbor, practically nobody else has, ever since, or

There were a lot of changes. For, while trying to blow up Pearl Harbor was just a part of World War II, what really blew up was the roof of a world which then became a mixed bag of blessings and dismay for the next quarter of a century. Until the big war, for most eople the world had been a lifelong journey through a dismal swamp where, except for Japan, almost every country in Asia and Africa was centuries behind the times, held in outright thralldom by the big powers of the West, or under the Western thumb.

The war brought changes as fantastic as the age of exploration. Everywhere new nations were born with a chance for the first time to achieve their own ecstasy or agony.

Has man learned much from World War II? Not much, basically. In many ways he has only rearranged the furniture.

Japan was denuded of its acquisitions, forced back into its home islands. The vast Germany of Hitler was split in half. But the allies split in half, too. The Soviet Union is now the antagonist of the West. And Japan and West Germany, more prosperous now than in all their history, are the friends and proteges of the United States.

Through the bankruptcy of power that the war brought, many people and nations acknowledged grudgingly the rights of others to freedom, justice and dignity only in turn to see the newly freed turn cannibals on themselves and the rights of neighbors.

Spades Give Big Advantage

By Oswald & James Jacoby Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

One of the points discussed by Albert Morehead in "Morehead on Bidding" is the difference between suits. When each side has approximately the same high card strength and all hands are balanced the chances are that either side can make two odd in its best suit. When the hands are more unbalanced it is likely that each side can make game or even slam in their best suit.

In all these situations the side with the spades has a tremendous advantage.

South has a good spade bid and North a normal raise to two spades. The spade raise improves South's hand to the extent that he can afford to jump to game. In spite of the fact that North and South only have 18 high card points between them game is easy. South loses one trick each in spades, diamonds

Holding 22 high card points divided evenly, East and West can make four hearts just as easily. They have to lose to three aces but that is all. Give them the spades and give North and South the hearts and West would be able to overcall at the one level. As it was, it was too dangerous for West to bid two hearts and North and South bid game without interference.

This hand was played in a duplicate game. One East player stuck his neck out a mile and bid three clubs over North's two spades. This did not stop South from becoming declarer at four spades but West opened the king of clubs. South won that trick and knocked out the ace of trumps but East cashed a high club and continued the trick with the jack of trumps and this East-West pair secured the only plus score of the table.

Minor Shenanigans Call For Some Discipline

President's Report Soon On Nation's Economy

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business News Analyst NEW YORK (AP) - It is a time for taking the brightest view possible of the past and projecting great hopes for the future. The process is well under way now, for the economic report of the President is to be published next month.

This document in the past has shown all the skills of the economist in assessing difficult problems and the hopes, foibles and frustrations of both the economist and the politician.

At this time last year, for example the President preparing a report that said:

"I will also look to the Federal Reserve System to provide assistance in premoting the objectives we all share: - Meeting the credit needs of a vigorous and growing economy, while preventing excessive credit flows that could carry the pace of expansion beyond prudent speed limits

Cooperation between the Fed and the fiscal officials, the President and his advisers, was not one of the notable economic achievements of 1966.

Nor was the hope fulfilled that "business and labor accept the principles of the guideposts for noninflationary behavior." The guideposts were pounded into the ground by both groups. Hopefully, the President and his advisers wrote a year ago that "those who proclaim inflation is already here have not turned over all the price tags." At the time the President had a case. He has none now. The "bitter defense of freedom in Viet Nam" was said to carry an "incalculable" price in death, pain and grief, "but the economic cost of Viet Nam imposes no unbearable burden on our resources.'

Increased spending for Viet Nam was one of the factors that made for inflation and caused the President to announce spending cutbacks. Despite this, the annual economic report is a remarkable assessment of the state of the nation, its potentials and its weakness In describing "the new economic environment" early this year, the 1966 report accurately posed these as the key ques-- Will there be enough plant capacity to produce all the goods and services buyers will
